Inpatient Vs Observation Quick Interqual

Inpatient status means that if you have serious medical problems that require highly technical skilled care. Observation status means that have a condition that doctors want to monitor to see if you require inpatient admission. You may be assigned to observation status when your doctors aren't sure how sick you actually are.

Clinical Determination of Appropriate Patient Status

Our last two columns in November and December 2012 discussed clinical indicators of inpatient medical necessity for patients admitted with certain problematic, high audit-risk conditions. This month's column is the third in this series and completes that discussion. “Medical necessity” is a vague standard, subject to broad interpretation based on clinical practice and judgment.
