in righting health policy d robert macdougall argues that bioethics needs but does not have adequate tools for justifying law and policy bioethics tools are mostly theories about what we owe each other but justifying laws and policies requires more at a minimum it requires tools for explaining the legitimacy of actions intended to control or influence others it consequently requires political rather than moral philosophy after showing how bioethicists have consistently failed to use tools suitable for achieving their political aims macdougall develops an interpretation of kant s political philosophy on this account the legitimacy of health laws does not derive from the morality of the behaviors they require but derives instead from their role in securing our equal freedom from each other macdougall uses this kantian account to show the importance of political philosophy for bioethics first he shows how evaluating kidney markets in terms of the legitimacy of prohibiting sales rather than the morality of selling kidneys reverses the widely accepted view that kantian philosophy supports legally prohibiting markets second macdougall argues that an account of political authority is necessary for settling longstanding bioethics debates about the legal and even moral standards that should govern informed consent this hackett edition first published in 1981 is an unabridged and unaltered republication of the seventh 1907 edition as published by macmillan and company limited from the forward by john rawls in the utilitarian tradition henry sidgwick 1838 1900 has an important place his fundamental work the methods of ethics first edition 1874 seventh and last edition 1907 here reprinted is the clearest and most accessible formulation of what we may call the classical utilitarian doctrine this classical doctrine holds that the ultimate moral end of social and individual action is the greatest net sum of the happiness of all sentient beings happiness is specified as positive or negative by the net balance of pleasure over pain or as sidgwick preferred to say as the net balance of agreeable over disagreeable consciousness
