archaeology has long dealt with issues of identity and especially with ethnicity with modern approaches emphasising dynamic and fluid social construction the archaeology of the iron age in particular has engendered much debate on the topic of ethnicity fuelled by the first availability of written sources alongside the archaeological evidence which has led many researchers to associate the features they excavate with populations named by greek or latin writers some archaeological traditions have had their entire structure built around notions of ethnicity around the relationships existing between large groups of people conceived together as forming unitary ethnic units on the other hand partly influenced by anthropological studies other scholars have written forcefully against iron age ethnic constructions such as the Celts. The 24 contributions to this volume focus on the south east Europe where the iron age has until recently been populated with numerous ethnic groups with which specific material culture forms have been associated. The first section is devoted to the core geographical area of south east Europe: Bulgaria, Croatia, Romania, Serbia and Slovenia as well as Albania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. The following three sections allow comparison with regions further to the west and the south west with contributions on central and western Europe, the British Isles and the Italian Peninsula. The volume concludes with four papers which provide more synthetic statements that cut across geographical boundaries. The final contributions bring together some of the key themes of the volume. The wide array of approaches to identity presented here reflects the continuing debate on how to integrate material culture protohistoric evidence largely classical authors looking in on first millennium BC societies and the impact of recent nationalistic agendas.

Rice fortification is a proven technique to address the prevalence of micronutrient malnutrition, i.e. hidden hunger. This book, Rice Fortification: Technology, Machinery and Quality Assurance, aims to provide comprehensive technical literature on the production of fortified rice (FR) with emphasis on the raw ingredients, technology, equipment and machinery, micronutrient analysis, quality assurance and control (QA/QC) and government programs and policies for successful implementation. Key features of the book include discussion on the importance of raw ingredients, i.e. broken rice, vitamins and mineral premix (VMP) for the manufacturing of fortified rice kernels (FRK) including the detailed description of each process operation such as grinding, mixing, extrusion, drying and polishing; production of FR, packaging, storage and shelf life evaluation of FRK and FR along with the required plant and machinery to produce FRK and FR; QA/QC insights and the micronutrient analysis; consumer acceptance; GMP, GHP and HACCP protocols as well as Indian standards; efficacy and safety of FR. This book, written and edited by a team of experts who have worked on rice fortification technology, will be of immense help to industry professionals and academicians as well as undergraduate students and postgraduate researchers. This book will also guide through troubleshooting tips to support continued learning professional development and production of fr finally available a high quality book of the original classic edition of the gospel of st john a series of discourses new edition it was previously published by other bona fide publishers and is now after many years back in print this is a new and freshly published edition of this culturally important work by frederick denison maurice which is now at last again available to you get the pdf and epub now as well included in your purchase you have the gospel of st john a series of discourses new edition in epub and pdf format to read on any tablet ereader desktop laptop or smartphone simultaneous get it now enjoy this classic work today these selected paragraphs distill the contents and give you a quick look inside the gospel of st john a series of discourses new edition look inside the book john the grain which those husks sometimes conceal for which they are sometimes a substitute it is just because theology in his gospel offers itself to us as a living root out of which all living powers living thoughts living acts may develop themselves it is just because there is nothing in him that is abstract because that which is deep and eternal proves itself to be deep and eternal by entering into all the relations of time by manifesting itself in all the common doings of men it is therefore i believe that he makes his appeal not to the man of technicalities not to the school doctor but to the simple wayfarer and at the same time to the man of science who does not forget that he is a man and who expects to ascertain principles only by the honest method of experiment he may promote it so far as he believes that he is a fellow learner with those whom he is teaching so far as he is convinced that the words of the evangelist are clearer and diviner than any which he of his own wit or by the help of inferior books can put in their place so far as he desires that his own eyes and those of all students may be purged that they may see what is actually in the words so far as he believes that there is one who is above the words above the writer of them to whom they point and from whom all the wisdom that is in them comes so far as he trusts for himself and encourages all to trust that this teacher wills us to come to the knowledge of his truth and will withhold no help that we need in the pursuit of it
